

I would like to file a comment with the FCC opposing the weakening of Indiana's law. Since the CBA is attempting to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers and anybody that I currently have a business relationship with (e.g., my bank, credit card company, long distance carrier) will be able to call me as often as they want I would like to know what happened to my rights. This is not acceptable. Unless of course we can have the employee's home phone numbers to contact them any time we'd like to at their homes.

Thank you.
